IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan.® It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Wires Strung Between Telephone Poles, Are A Disaster Waiting To Happen

By Dan Rattiner

I was looking through some old photographs the other day, when I came across one picture taken at the front of my house in 1976. This was the year I bought my house in East Hampton.

After remembering fondly that I paid $32,500 for this house, and after noticing how much younger we looked, and how much longer our hair was which was the fashion of the day, I saw something in the background that seemed very wrong. It was the telephone lines strung along the telephone poles out on the street.

They were unlike the ones we have today, which are as thick as a python. They were thin wires like piano wires, and they were the kind that if they broke and fell across your body, would probably electrocute you. The ones that are on the telephone poles today, if they broke and fell would probably give you a fractured skull.

I looked at some of the other pictures. If the wires were a hundred times thicker and maybe two hundred times heavier, the telephone poles they hung on were just the same as they always were. Pictures of people out on the street showed the poles spaced out exactly as they are now, and were made of exactly the same material, which was wood. Having telephone poles of the same strength as twenty-five years ago was bad if you were going to have wires 200 times heavier.

Who is monitoring the weight of what we put on our telephone poles? How much weight can each pole bear?

I looked up from where I was sitting and out of the window to the lines hanging today, and I thought for the first time how absolutely horrendous they are. For the sake of cablevision and the Internet, they have become a blot on our landscape and no entreaties by citizens groups or our politicians can get anyone to consider removing them. But being ugly was just the beginning.

Who is monitoring the weight of what we are putting up on our telephone poles? How much weight can each pole bear? Is there anybody in any position to do anything about this? What I have found is alarming. The lines on our streets are an accident waiting to happen.

First of all, there is the matter of ownership. I learned about this in appalling detail, when a second telephone pole appeared four years ago alongside the old telephone pole directly in front of my house. Naturally, I figured the old pole was worn out and weakened and they had put in a brand new one to take its place. After a year went by with nothing else happening, though I decided to make some phone calls. If one telephone pole was ugly, two of them, spaced a foot and a half apart, were even uglier. When were they were going to remove the old one?

I soon found out that there was general fuzziness about who these telephone poles belonged to. The lighting company told me to call the telephone company and the telephone company told me to call the lighting company. It turns out that every telephone pole that you see was put up by one or the other of these companies but nobody knows exactly whose is whose. The records of this are

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Sag Harbor's E.L. Doctorow has to be among the many alumni of the Bronx High School of Science who is smiling over the school's success this year in – not some acadmeic competition, but basketball. Recently featured in the New York Times, the Wolverines, who wear "Science" on their uniforms, are giving lie to the notion that "nerds" can't play sports. The team is 20-4 this season.

Forget about all those tres chic fashion shows: it's rumored that at the upcoming Inner Circle Show, the yearly spoof comprised of the City Hall press corps, Mayor Rudy Giuliani will present a selection of his many roles and costumes of past years. (Perhaps the retrospective comes out of the possibility that if Rudy wins the Senate race he won't be back at City Hall next year.) In previous shows Hizzoner has appeared in a Yankee uniform, as a greaser in Grease and, if you can believe it, Marilyn Monroe. This year Rudy has already been seen in his greaser/biker gear again, with a thick black wig, leather jacket and shades and photographed on the streets with like-attired bikers. We wonder if he's thinking about doing Hillary in drag?

Steven Spielberg must have been taken aback when it came to his attetnion that a young man from Iran was posing as a nephew of the famous director. The youth, who called himself Jonathan Taylor Spielberg, has been pulling a congame reminiscent of Six Degrees of Separation, which had been based on the real-life story of someone who has claimed to be the son of Sidney Poiter. The scam was discovered when an official at the school Taylor was attending phoned his home because the youth had been absent from school a great deal. Taylor had a way with the truth. He told schoolmates he was going to be in the next X-Files movie and he had recently been sporting a license plate that read "HRH" (in other words, His Royal Highness) and was beginning to spread stories that he knew Prince William. But speaking of Spielberg: this would make a great movie...

Water Mill resident Ron Ziel has declared his candicacy for Congress. A historian who is especially knowledgable about the Long Island Rail Road, Zeil said he attempted to submit himself for screening by the Republican party but was not contacted to be screened. Zeil, a former executive editor of Dan's Papers, has published written or co-written seventeen books, most recently Birth of the American Century, a history of the Spanish-American War. An advisor to a number of elected officials on railroad and transportation issues, Ziel says this activist experience is a good foundation for him to push off into the political arena –plus the fact that he is definitely not a Washington insider. At least not yet.

As a result, executives from these two companies met some years ago and decided that they would both make a commitment equally to replace one hundred poles a year in a given area. It didn't matter who came upon an old pole first, they'd each keep count and when they got to a hundred, they'd stop and wait for the other company to catch up.

On the other hand, there were some poles that had identifying marks on them. Where that was the case, the company that owned the pole would be responsible for removing it after all the wiring had been moved to the new pole. I was told that everybody who had the wiring up there had to be informed of the location of where a new pole was replacing an old pole, and this could take months, even years. Eventually, when the old pole was bereft of all wires, the company who owned it, if the brand was on it, would come along and remove it.

I learned all this, as I said, four years ago. After two years of having the two poles in place, half of the wires had been moved from one to the other. Then a car skidded off the road and slammed into the new pole, weakening it – you could see vertical cracks going up about one third of the way from where the car had hit. From this point on, wires began being moved from the new pole back to the old pole, except by some crew that had orders to move wires from the old pole to the new pole. I wrote about this at the time, and sometimes when I would go down to ask some of the workmen if they wanted coffee – they seemed to be there once a week – I was told that I was getting special treatment because I had written an article in the paper pointing out this remarkable problem. They were very much on the case.

As I said, that was two years ago. Today, the two poles still stand.

As for the land that the poles are dug into, that's an equally complicated matter. The ground the poles are put into are the shoulders of the roads, which can be state, county, town or village roads. One or another of these owns that ground.

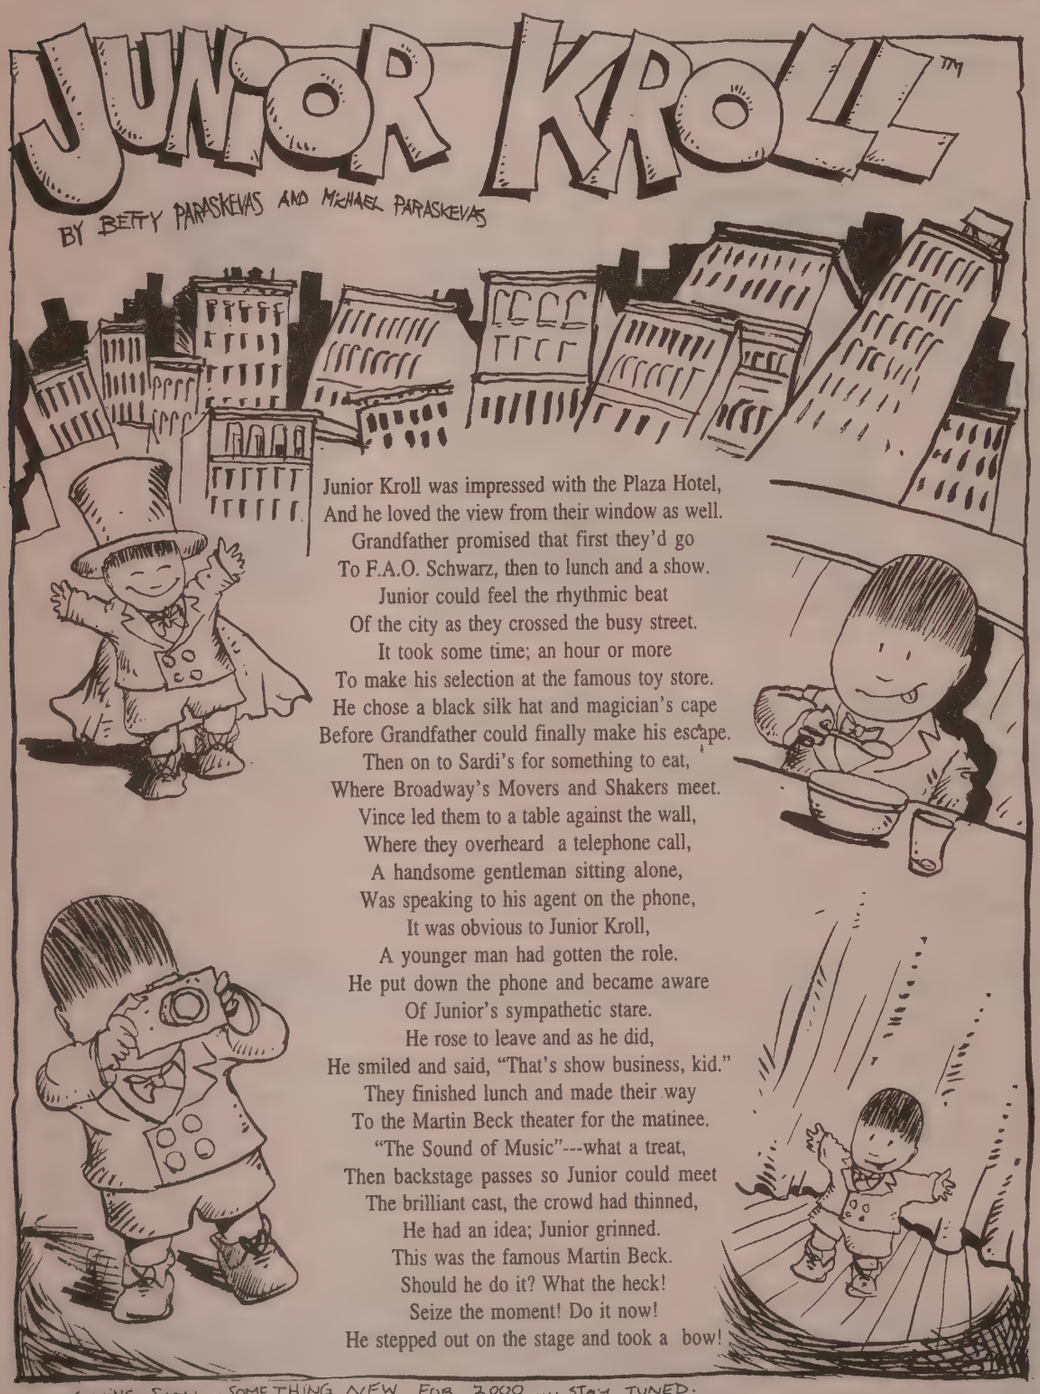
As for the wires on the poles, who puts them up, how much they each weigh and how many of them there are, there seems to be no oversight whatsoever. The original people who hung the wires, the telephone company and the electric company, paid the various governments nothing for the privilege of doing so. Electricity and a telephone connection were the modern wonders of the world, and towns and villages virtually begged the people putting in the poles to come their way. Later when cablevision strung their single wire, the towns and villages, a little more savvy, took the position that they could collect an annual fee from the cable company for each mile of wire. They were on their right of way, after all, and though the cable companies did pay these fees, which were rather small, they later argued when they began expanding the number of channels that the fee should not go up, since, as they said, the fees charged the phone companies did not go up when they added subscribers, they went from zero to zero. This logic prevailed.

Today, the cable lines, which were once only as thick as your finger, are as thick as your arm. We have to have cable after all. The more the merrier. So there seems to be no limit on how thick the wire can get. With nobody overseeing this system, what's to prevent there coming a time when everything collapses under its own weight? And who is to be responsible for the damage done to whatever is under them? Cars can be crushed, buses turned sideways, little old ladies with baby carriages crunched flat as a pancake.

I might note that this new danger of being crushed due to a mechanical failure is not in place of the danger of being electrocuted, it is on top of it. If anything, if there were a half a million volts going through the wires in the old days, there are at least two or three million going through them now.

I made telephone calls to both the telephone company and the lighting company, asking them how many pounds per square inch the poles were designed to hold, what would be the weight factor in a high wind, when the problem would be not only compression but, tension and torque? I could find nobody who could give me a proper answer on this.

The solution, of course, is to put all our wires going up and down the streets underground, like they do in the big cities. With the world getting more and more wired every day, with every new hand held device, pager and telephone, this is going to have to happen sometime anyway. Why do we have to wait for a disaster to come along? The time is now. Call all your friends. Wait, don't do that. •



JUNIOR KROLL™
BY BETTY PAPASKEVAS AND MICHAEL PAPASKEVAS
Junior Kroll was impressed with the Plaza Hotel,
And he loved the view from their window as well.
Grandfather promised that first they'd go
To F.A.O. Schwarz, then to lunch and a show.
Junior could feel the rhythmic beat
Of the city as they crossed the busy street.
It took some time; an hour or more
To make his selection at the famous toy store.
He chose a black silk hat and magician's cape
Before Grandfather could finally make his escape.
Then on to Sardi's for something to eat,
Where Broadway's Movers and Shakers meet.
Vince led them to a table against the wall,
Where they overheard a telephone call,
A handsome gentleman sitting alone,
Was speaking to his agent on the phone,
It was obvious to Junior Kroll,
A younger man had gotten the role.
He put down the phone and became aware
Of Junior's sympathetic stare.
He rose to leave and as he did,
He smiled and said, "That's show business, kid."
They finished lunch and made their way
To the Martin Beck theater for the matinee.
"The Sound of Music"---what a treat,
Then backstage passes so Junior could meet
The brilliant cast, the crowd had thinned,
He had an idea; Junior grinned.
This was the famous Martin Beck.
Should he do it? What the heck!
Seize the moment! Do it now!
He stepped out on the stage and took a bow!

It's Shocking How The Truth Can Get Turned Upside Down To Make A Movie

By Dan Rattiner

Last winter I wrote that there was a giant eel under one of the frozen ponds in the Hamptons, thirty feet long, a native of Equador. Over the course of several weeks there were several encounters people had with the eel, all of which the eel won, after which the eel disappeared beneath the ice again. Last winter was a quiet winter, and I thought writing about this imaginary eel would liven things up.

Two weeks ago, I warned the residents of North Haven to stay indoors between February 7 and February 28, because seven lions were going to be let loose to eat up all the deer on the North Haven peninsula. There are too many deer on the peninsula. And, the village of North Haven could never seem to get a majority of the residents to agree to thin the herd by hunting them down. It seemed to me, the South African lions would solve the problem. I'm sure they would.

I made all this up of course, and though there were few people gullible enough to believe this outlandishness was really true, most people enjoyed the hoax and told us so (among them were Fox News, ABC News, News 12 and Channel 5). From this perspective, I suppose that I have no business in writing about Hurricane, a movie about prize fighter Rubin "Hurricane" Carter. Denzel Washington, the actor portraying Carter, has been nominated for an Academy Award. This film is filled with wild inaccuracies about a very real situation. And since there is no tradition of filmmakers hoaxing the movie goers to match the tradition of newspapers hoaxing its readers, movies about real historical incidents are generally assumed to be accurate, or nearly so, by movie goers.

The movie... takes off into lala land. In real life, though, the facts are different. Carter's early criminal record came about because he mugged people.

I am also interested in the inaccuracies of this movie Hurricane because the judge in the case, Sam Larner, is someone I've known since I was born. Other than the time when I was about ten, when he worked as a crusading prosecutor cleaning up the New Jersey City mob and the Larners had to lock their doors for fear of retaliation, Sam Larner's other day in the news was, after his appointment as a judge, the conviction of Rubin "Hurricane" Carter for murder, not just once, but twice.

I know the true story from stem to stern, and though I love Bob Dylan, I was appalled when he wrote a song about Carter suggesting that he was framed by a corrupt District Attorneys' office. I even asked my Uncle Sam, which is what I called Judge Larner, if there was any truth to it and he became agitated at the idea and said, "A jury convicted him twice, he did it, believe me."

The movie however, picks up where Bob Dylan left off and takes it off into lala land. Carter's life is portrayed as his getting the short end of the stick in one shameful incident after another. His early criminal record came about, the movie says, because Carter ran to the aid of a child who was being molested. That conviction is portrayed as what set off the D.A., in the middle of Rubin "Hurricane" Carter's boxing career, on a vendetta against him. Now there is a murder charge. He is accused of shooting the owner and several patrons in a bar in Paterson, New Jersey. Obviously a frame up. The eyewitness, who identifies Carter, a petty crook named Alfred Bellow, cannot be believable unless the murder took place at two forty five in the morning; something in the movie, which the cops insist, is the case. Carter is convicted and sent off to prison to serve a fifteen-year term.

Now, the boxing career he left behind, supposedly in his prime, (he could have been a champion!) is portrayed. His big chance, two years earlier, had come against Joey Giardello of Philadelphia for the middleweight title. And in the movie version, Carter beats the daylights out of Giardello, but loses the decision. The crowd boos at the injustice of it all. Another fix.

The movie now turns to a commune in Canada, populated by a group of Americans who had fled there to avoid the draft during the Vietnam War. They are now planning to return to the States. It is 1981 and somehow they get involved in the Rubin "Hurricane" Carter case. The commune members search through files and investigators notes, and after two months come upon a report surpressed by the police that says the killing actually happened at 2:30 a.m., not 2:45. Armed with this document, the commune members get the case reopened, there is a new trial before a new judge, Carter is exonerated and in the end, goes free. He had been convicted of a crime he did not commit; justice triumphs; end of movie.

In real life though, the facts are very different. Carter's early criminal record came about because he mugged people. It had nothing to do with interfering with a child molester.

I actually saw the Joey Giardello-Rubin Hurricane Carter fight. Carter had his good days and his bad days in the ring. That day was a bad day. The decision in the end was not booed, but cheered. In the papers the next day a poll of ringside reporters had Giardello winning eleven rounds to four, which is what the judges had. Incidentally, Joey Giardello, who is still around, has threatened to sue the filmmakers for portraying him as being an incompetent fighter and somehow involved in a fix.

The shooting in the bar, as described in the movie, occurred because the owners of the bar, who were white, were refusing to serve black people. The facts are that at the time there was a lot of racial tension in Paterson and about midnight, a white man went into a black bar and shot the owner. Word quickly went around the town and there was talk in the black community of revenge, or "shaking" which was a term used at the time. Carter not only was identified as one of the two people doing the shooting in the white bar at 2:30, but witnesses also testified that after the first shooting Carter had asked friends of the black victims how he could locate a gun. He wanted to do some "shaking."

As for the police suppressing the evidence that the shooting took place at 2:30 a.m., it never happened. The day after the shooting the Newark

Its Shocking How The Truth Can Be Turned Upside Down To Make A Newspaper

By Dan Rattiner

2000 marks the 40th year I have been publishing Dan's Papers, and people often ask how I got to start Dan's Papers. The truth is my dad owned a pharmacy in Montauk and I wanted to do something so as not to head into the business of retailing which I found rather bored me. Dad had hoped I would follow in his footsteps.

But the other day somebody asked me how I first learned to PRINT a newspaper. I told him and in doing so realized that unlike the starting-the-newspaper story which is fairly mundane, the printing of a newspaper story is a nearly unbelievable tale. I thought you might like to hear it.

I had been named editor, in my sophomore year at college, of the campus humor magazine. (Michael O'Donoghue, who later went on to be a major writer for Saturday Night Live, was Features Editor.) We never did go to any printer when putting together the magazine. We just typed things up and shipped them off somewhere. Two weeks later we got back a glossy magazine. This was in upstate New York, at the University of Rochester.

Our office was in the student union building at this school, which, at the time, was so overcrowded that all that could be spared for UGH Magazine as it was called was a large closet. The closet was narrow and deep, and managed to accommodate two desks and a table. It opened on a hall.

Inside, there was another door, which we had closed up, which led into a larger space in which was published the campus newspaper.

What has all this to do with printing? Well, the first thing I learned about publishing a newspaper was that it could influence real estate and politics. Our magazine only came out four times a year. The newspaper came out three times a week. They wanted our space.

I didn't get this concept at first because when the newspaper began to publish a humor column every issue I thought it was just a nice thing to add to the general melee. But then they began to write very serious editorials about our irreverent magazine, suggesting our articles were offensive, we had gone too far, were a discredit to the school, and OUGHT TO BE SHUT DOWN. I got the message loud and clear. One of the associate editors confirmed it.

The best defense, of course, is a good offense. But since we only came out every two months, there was not much I could do in print. The editor of the newspaper declined to publish letters I wrote in our defense. I concocted a scheme.

In April of that year, and this was in 1959, I drove my stationwagon from the campus into the center of town to visit the newspaper's printing plant. This was a commercial printing operation where they printed a hospital newsletter and a couple of weekly newspapers for some of the suburbs of the city. I met the owner. To this day, I do not know why he agreed to the plan I had in mind. It would surely mean the end of his printing the school paper.

After introducing myself as the editor of the school humor magazine, I asked him what it would cost to publish a special edition of the school paper, one that would look exactly like a regular edition of that paper – same number of pages, same features etc. He told me. We had that in our budget. I then said that what we would like to do is come at night, the evening of the same day when the regular paper was printed.

We would put together a rogue edition. And by morning we would have exactly the same number of copies printed with exactly the same date on the front as the regular edition published by the regular staff earlier. Only the articles would be different.

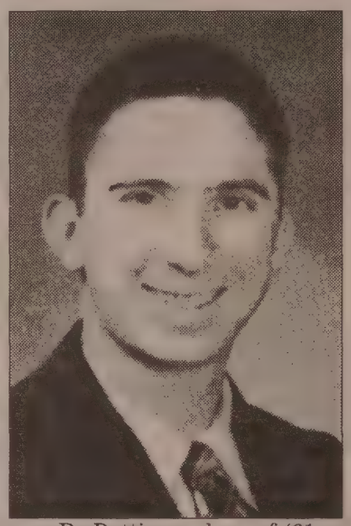
Our plan, I told the owner of this printing plant, was to hijack the regular edition as it was being delivered to campus the next day by the printer. We would replace it with the rogue edition.

Thus it was that at ten o'clock at night, myself and the humor magazine staff arrived at the printing plant where we were met by the owner. He unlocked the front door. We went inside. And that night I learned all about how to print a newspaper first hand. It was the old fashioned way back then. We had woodcuts and Linotype and molten lead. I can still remember, vividly, holding up the wooden front page logo – it read CAMPUS TIMES – realizing I had no business whatever to be handling this.

I had written a shameless editorial in which I confessed that there was nothing whatever wrong really with the humor magazine and we only were trying to close them down because we wanted their office inasmuch as it was adjacent to ours.

For the front page, I had a fast breaking, last minute story, breathlessly reported as an interview with the President of the University, that the school was immediately going to go on the tri-semester system. The summer recess, scheduled for late May to last until September, would really not begin until August and would then be only three weeks. More school meant higher grades and a finer academic record, the University President said.

There was lots more. But the real fun was what happened after the sun rose the next morning. The van, bearing fresh copies of the real CAMPUS TIMES, headed out from the back of the plant. We followed with our bogus edition of the CAMPUS TIMES, dated the same day, filling the back of our stationwagon. It was suddenly clear we could not just pull the van off the road. We just followed them.



D. Rattiner, class of '61

What happened was that this van would stop at a dining hall, they would unload a bundle, drop it in front of a stand, and drive off. We would drive up, pick up the bundle, and we'd replace it with the rogue edition.

The last stop was the lobby of a six story women's residence and dining hall. The driver of the van delivered the last bundle of the real paper. He turned and left. We loaded it into the stationwagon, took out our last bundle of the rogue paper, and then sat on a sofa in the lobby there to watch events. Young women would see it, think oh the new CAMPUS TIMES is out, pick it up, read the first paragraph which told them summer vacation had almost vanished, scream and run off.

Much of the University was shut down that day by the turmoil. All telephone service was knocked out. Secretaries in the Administration Building staged a walkout. There was a chair throwing riot in the Faculty Dining Room. We were screamed at and run out of the women's residence. We retreated in the station wagon, drove through campus where everyone seemed in a state of shock and spent the rest of the afternoon in an off-campus bar.

That year, 1959, was the first year that the Student Government had installed a Student Supreme Court. I became their first case. The trial, I recall, was held one evening in one of the reading rooms of the Rush Rhees Library.

There were half a dozen charges filed against me. (Misuse of funds, causing a riot etc.) But in the end, all I got convicted of was lying to the Finance Board when, in late April, just days before we went off to print our rogue edition, I had told them all we would do was our regular magazine. I indeed knew we were about to do a newspaper, but as I told the Judicial Board, I couldn't tell the Finance Board that because it was a surprise.

My punishment? A slap on the wrist. I was removed from being editor of the humor magazine for the rest of the school year. Well, we hadn't been planning to publish another edition anyway. And summer was only a month away by this time.

Wasn't it? •

Local Surge in Heating Oil Prices Connected to Worldwide Machinations

By Jerry Cimisi

As the residents of the East End look at their heating bills in dismay – thankful only that the outrageous peak of $2.40 or so per gallon price has fallen back to the $2 (if still outrageous) range, they are merely suffering from the outcome of the actions of a gamut of global interests.

In March, 1999, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (the mideast consortium influenced for the most part by the Saudis) along with Norway and Mexico, agreed they were not getting enough for their oil and made a "gentlemen's agreement" that each country would cut back production by seven to eight percent and not raise it until April, 2000 – the time, of course, when the demand for heating oil will have decreased in the northern hemisphere.

Meanwhile, refineries and distributors at home had gone through three straight mild winters and apparently expected this winter to be likewise. They ordered less oil. A bitter cold snap in January made heating oil prices skyrocket. In the third week of January, oil that could usually be had for $1.40 a gallon went up to the $1.85-$2.00 level; a week later it passed $2.40.

The public howled. East End Assemblyman Fred Thiele pressed New York State Attorney General Elliot Spitzer to investigate oil distributors to see if there were grounds for charging them with price gouging. New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani (doubtless with an eye to this year's Senate race with Hillary Clinton) demanded that President Clinton release a portion of the nation's Strategic Oil Reserves into the market to bring down prices. New York Senator Charles Schumer also joined in this request.

Ultimately Secretary of Energy Bill Richardson announced that the United States would hold on to the reserves, contending that these trillions of gallons of oil should be used only in a more severe crisis.

The government currently has 21,000,000,000 – twenty-one trillion – barrels of oil in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The majority of it is stored in Alaska, California, Texas and the Gulf of Mexico, though there are many other states that have some portion of the reserve; New York has 15 million barrels.

The Strategic Petroleum Reserve was established in 1975, under the auspices of the Energy Policy Conservation Act, doubtless in response to the energy crisis of 1973. The intent was to use the reserve in times of war or oil embargo.

Immediately after America led the bombing of Iraq in January, 1991, President Bush released thirty-three million barrels from the reserve into the marketplace. Iraq had taken over oil rich Kuwait and global anxiety over a war engulfing the mideast had pushed oil up to $31 a barrel. In October, 1990, the price had been over $41.

Within a day of Bush releasing the oil from the reserve, the price had gone down to $21.

Bush's decision to release the reserve was both praised and criticized. It was pointed out that the price had already been coming down.

At any rate, since the very genuine fears that bombing Iraq would result in a greater middle east war, the reserves have been used in less anxious times. In 1992, during Bush's last year in office, Congress amended the Energy Policy Conservation Act to allow for reserves to be drawn in less extreme circumstances.

In 1996, President Clinton sold a portion of the reserves for $96 million in order to empty a reserve storage facility in Louisiana that was being closed down due to leakage. Also in '96, twelve million barrels, valued at $227 million were sold to help ease the national debt. Clinton was running for a second term and he declared that this latter sale had helped to lower the price of gas.

America imports half the oil it uses. In 1980, the U.S. was importing thirty-seven percent of its oil needs. In 1973, 1979 and 1990, oil rose sharply; each time a recession followed. The pundits say a recession is not likely this time: there is a great big booming economy to act as a sort of safety net and, perhaps more importantly, the value of all the crude oil used in the country is a smaller part of the economy than in other years. In 1980 it was 5.5 percent; today it is .8 percent.

There are other countries that import more oil than we do. The economies of Japan, Korea, Taiwan and a number of southern European countries are more in danger of suffering from the vagaries of the price of oil. The countries that would benefit the most are Saudi Arabia, Russia, Venezuela, and Mexico.

Speaking of our neighbor south of the border: Secretary Richardson went there this past weekend to convince the powers that-be high oil prices might look good in the short term but in the long term they will hurt Mexico – because the Mexican economy is so much tied into the American economy. And, like America, oil now figures as a much smaller part of the national income. In 1983, oil contributed to about 6 percent of Mexico's income, but by the end of the 1990s it had dropped to 1.7 percent.

If Mexico may realize its own self-serving ties to the United States, nonetheless Richardson's visit could provoke no promises from Mexico increase production of oil. Richardson's counterpart, Mexican Energy Secretary Luis Tellez, declared that his country would continue to honor the "gentlemen's agreement" it had made with OPEC and other countries such as Norway and Venezuela.

The news comes soon after crude oil for delivery in March peaked at $30.45 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange; it dropped back down to $29.51 by the end of the week.

At the same time Richardson's earnest economic pilgrimage was being rebuffed by Mexico, there was the news that an earlier report of Saudi Arabia increasing its output by three million barrels a day in a goodwill attempt to relieve the oil crisis was unfounded. Saudi Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi had been visiting South Korea and reportedly told its President Kim Dae Jung that high oil prices would cause worldwide inflation and indicated that Saudi Arabia could easily put three million barrels a day on the market on short notice.

But several days later, Saudi Arabia (which is OPEC's largest producer of oil) denied al-Naimi had said any such thing. What the Saudi minister had said was that Saudi Arabia, could, if the situation got worse, put three million barrels into the market quickly, not that it was going to.

The government currently has 21,000,000,000 – twenty-one trillion – barrels of oil in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

SNICK

Film About Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee On TNT Feb. 27

By Joan Zandell

During the years of the Civil Rights Movement, there was a student organization known as SNCC (pronounced SNICK). The letters stand for Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee and its members were the young, unsung heroes of the Civil Rights Movement.

For the first time a film has been made about SNCC; it is called Freedom Song. It is a poignant, original film written and directed by Phil Alden Robinson who created Field of Dreams. He teams with Danny Glover, star and Executive Producer to tell the story of the arrival in McComb, Mississippi of Bob Moses, an organizer from SNCC, and how that town is changed forever. The film will air on The Turner Network Television (TNT) on February 27, at 7 p.m. and it is not to be missed.

The making of Freedom Song has some of the qualities that obligate it to become an "overnight success" after twenty years in the business. It was actually nine years in the making, as many years as it took to get Forrest Gump made in Hollywood, but not quite twenty, as long as it took Richard Attenborough to produce Ghandi. Despite its Hollywood director, bankable star and impressive cast, why didn't Hollywood grab Freedom Song? What did Ted Turner see that everyone else seemed to have missed? Perhaps it was the script's insistence on the truth and the story's attention to detail.

In May of 1961, the Freedom Rides had begun under the auspices of CORE (Congress for Racial Equality).

Since 1946, the Supreme Court had barred segregation in interstate-regulated vehicles and facilities. But the states of the Deep South flagrantly affronted that ruling and had separate facilities for whites and blacks at bus stations. As Rabbi Marc Schneier says in his book Shared Dreams, "CORE, which wanted to publicize such practices, organized groups of volunteers to ride South to try to integrate those facilities. At the time, Dr. Martin Luther King said, 'CORE started the Freedom Ride and should get the credit. We will play the supportive role.'"

Schneier goes on to say, "When the first riders reached Alabama, one of the buses they were in was fired-bombed outside Anniston. In Birmingham, Freedom Riders were beaten while police watched. On May 20, a crowd wielding clubs and pipes attacked a bus entering Montgomery. King wanted to get to the scene to lend assistance, but he was trapped in Ralph Abernathy's church as it was attacked by rocks and tear gas... Over the course of the summer, hundreds of Freedom Riders were beaten, battered and arrested."

In 1961, McComb, Mississippi was one such town. Members of SNCC and CORE were beaten; hundreds of students were suspended from school and jailed. McComb was the first town to receive Bob Moses, a black New Yorker who had given up his job as a math teacher at Horace Mann, a prestigious private school in Manhattan, to serve as field secretary for SNCC. His new job would include organizing and teaching black citizens how to register to vote.

Moses was repeatedly jailed and beaten, but among the most horrendous casualties that summer was the cold blooded public murder of Herbert Lee. Lee was a farmer and father of nine who had chosen to introduce Moses to other members of the community. For his participation in helping community members to register to vote, Lee was gunned down in front of witnesses in broad daylight by his white next door neighbor, E.H. Hurst in a town called Liberty. Hurst was acquitted and never spent a moment in jail.

These are the facts around which the film Freedom Song are woven. All the characters are based on real people who live on in the memories of the members of the SNCC, which is currently celebrating its 40th Anniversary. Among those members are Bob Zellner, resident of Southampton, and the first white southerner to serve as field secretary for SNCC, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. He participated as a consultant on the film Mississippi Burning, he is a Civil Rights specialist for the Martin Luther King Museum to be built in Atlanta, and is the co-chair of the Anti-Bias Task Force of Southampton. He teamed up with Denis Craine, Executive Director of Wilderness Experiences, Inc. to bus in 500 children to the Westhampton Performing Theatre Arts on February 18th for a screening of Freedom Song. Afterwards the children heard from a panel of twelve Youth Leaders along with keynote speakers Bob Zellner, Reverend Marvin Dozier, Tracy Garrison from Facing History Facing Ourselves, and a Representative from the United Nations, as well as Sheila Jamison from TNT.

Freedom Song is about mass injustice in America's shameful past, man's inhumanity to man, and the spirit's remarkable ability to soar in the face of heinous acts and circumstances. Eventually the spirit's insistence changes reality through persistence, nonviolence, interconnectedness and love.

Don't miss Freedom Song on TNT, February 27, at 7 p.m. •

Curiously, although it is no surprise to find that exploration for oil is up in the United States, there are few long term plans by oil companies to substantially increase such exploration. Mid-February saw 773 rigs in operation, with only 153 looking for oil, the rest for gas; a year ago at the same time, there were 531 rigs, with about 100 looking for oil. In the 1997-98 period, there were over 400 rigs looking for oil. Again, this is attributed to the fact that oil is playing a smaller part in the overall economy.

Some analysts say the "gentlemen's agreement" may be easily broken, with one or more of the countries involved seeing it would be in their immediate interests to produce and thus sell more oil to the oil-hungry west.

Even if OPEC raises production this spring, there is the worry that the prices could climb even higher per barrel if Iraq doesn't import its supply in protest over continued U.N. sanctions. One expert was quoted as saying such a protest by Iraq could actually raise prices to $40 per gallon.

The cost of oil is affecting more than just home heating oil. Gasoline and diesel prices have risen. There is talk of paying $2 a gallon at the pump this summer. Recently a convoy of truckers tied up traffic on New Jersey's interstate in protest. And KeySpan, which owns LIPA and Brooklyn Union, reports an increase in customers switching from oil to gas. Airlines are charging more for a flight and companies which delivery their goods have in some cases spent a third more for fuel. In addition, businesses which depend on plastic bags, products of the petroleum industry, to wrap their wares, are suffering.

Finally, there remains the question: home heating oil prices have risen everywhere in the northeast: but the East End of Long Island is still higher than other places. A recent article in the Times quoted residents of Hastings-on-the Hudson in Westchester as paying thirty or forty cents less per gallon than here. Whether the price of oil goes up or down, this is still a question that needs to be answered. • and Bergen County newspapers in their accounts of the event list the time as 2:30 a.m., information they got from the police report.

As I mentioned, in real life, Carter was convicted twice for the murder. The first time, his conviction was largely based on the testimony of the petty crook, Alfred Bellow, who positively identified Carter. After that trial, Bellow went to the press and recanted his testimony, thus, the second trial. This time when Bellow got on the stand he said he had not lied at the first trial, that Carter was the gunman, but that he had lied to the press because he had been promised twenty seven thousand dollars by Carter's defense team, but they never paid the money.

Also, at the second trial, five people who had testified at the first trial that Carter had been with them elsewhere at the time, recanted and said that they had lied under oath after being pressed to do so. Carter was convicted again. And he was sent off to jail for fifteen years.

There was no Canadian commune that came down to investigate the matter. A total fabrication. There was a woman who had befriended Carter who led the investigation to clear his name. On a technicality she was able to get Carter out of jail, briefly, but the price she paid was that Carter went to the hotel where she was staying and beat her up. Back to jail he went.

Fifteen years went by, and with the Bob Dylan song being played over and over, there were still people who wanted to get him out of jail. Carter was a mythic figure now.

Finally, one of their appeals landed on the desk of Federal Judge Lee Sarokin, one of the most liberal judges in the country. Sarokin made what in retrospect seems to be a totally ridiculous ruling. He ordered that Carter be released and a new trial held because the prosecution should not have been permitted to argue that racial revenge was the motive. How this made any sense seemed beyond anybody at the time. The Klu Klux Klan lynching blacks in the Deep South is murder with a racial motive.

Anyway, many prosecution witnesses had died by this time, Carter had already served fifteen years and would soon be up for parole, and so it seemed a waste of time and money to prosecute Carter a third time. The DA's office therefore closed the case.

And, that's what really happened, not what you see in the movie.

I feel the same way about this as I did about the portrayal of the Kennedy assassination in Oliver Stone's movie JFK. The facts were so twisted in that movie that moviegoers left the theater believing they had finally once and for all learned the sick, psychotic, covered-up truth about that event. They had not, and neither have the movie goers of Denzel Washington's, Hurricane.

Then again, there are probably people hiding indoors to stay clear of the seven South African lions in North Haven. •

The Sheltered Islander

Observations of a New Islander #94
A Fishy Tale (Don't let Aunt Ruth read this)

The Loster Inn reopens this month, FINALLY! Having cruelly closed for the winter, they are finally taking pity on me and re-opening. Guess they got tired of seeing Mother and I stalk the premises.

I'm tired of eating frozen crabs. I was conversing with one of my future dinners just the other night, a crab named Gil. I asked him how things were under the Shelter Island docks these days, he clammed up right away. I thought I'd be nice, so instead of floundering around in my kitchen, I took him to a nice italian sand bar, Vinnie Calamari's Bar & Nacle Inn. Like our own fantastic Commander Cody's, their speciality is sole food.

Gil had several Bay Rums which loosened him up quite a bit. I'm no mind reefer, but I knew something was wrong. Tern's out his marriage was on the docks. Also, he was recovering from beluga, a fungus that scungeel's all over. Doc Kelp, our local sturgeon, gave him a cream and he was recovering nicely.

Just about that time, a fish named Monica swam by. On a scale of one to ten, she was a one. She ran a cheap shell game on Gil and kept urchin him on. He fell for her hook, line and sinker, well afterall, she was a blowfish...

I perched on a bar stool, not knowing what to do next.

"Well, mahi mahi, what do we have here?" said the bartender looking my way.

"Hello, I'm Sally Finn, and you are?"

"Marlin... nice to meet you," he said as he poured me a glass of Baylene (less calories than regular Bay). He gave me the latest wave of gossip. I didn't really care one ray or the other. It was just a fluke that I was there, but he could tell I was a softshell for a good story.

It seems our boy Marlin is starting a ferry service, the YesCarGo. He was having some old crab traps soddered to the bottom of the people ferries. Fish and crustaceans can scampi across in style. They'll have sliding scale fees at first and scallup later. The soddering job should have taken only a few days, but Marlin hired weakfish, so it would take alot longer. I gave him my e-snail address and told him I'd mention him in my column.

Marlin told me there's a new theater under the Greenport docks, the Moby Dick Memorial Theatre. They'll be showing great movies like; Jaws, Gone

FIVE YEARS AGO
"The O.J. Effect"
February 17, 1995

"If I hear another thing about O.J. I am going to throw up."

"This O.J. trial is a disgrace."

"I've never seen the media become so obsessed with something. There are a lot of important things going on in the world."

The above quotes were overheard by me at a party in Southampton last Saturday night. What I didn't hear were the quotes one hour after the party when these three people got home. But I can tell you what they said. They said: anything happen with O.J. while I was gone?

Never in American history has a people been more fascinated and more disgusted than with the O.J. trial. It is going to change the face of the nation.

Until today I thought the change would just be a slight one. Trials last a few days, maybe a few weeks. But today on television, I heard a commentator say the O.J. trial is going to last SIX MONTHS. If this is the case, then I believe the O.J. Simpson trial will have a profound effect on America. It will be up there, just because it is going on day in and day out, with the industrial revolution, the landing on the moon and the introduction of fast food.

Today is February 10. I have already been told that our nation's ski resorts are suffering this year because everybody is glued to the O.J. trial. Six months from now is two weeks before Labor Day Weekend. Mr. Shapiro and Ms. Clark will just be launching into their summations. It could well mean the worst season in the Hamptons, financially, ever.

Here is how the O.J. trial could affect the future of this nation.

1. The amount of abuse in this country, particularly sexual abuse, will plummet. Anybody making even a comment about his mate's crotch will be arrested within seconds. By the crotch police.

2. The number of domestic murders in this country will also plummet. The number of criminal murders in this country, however, will stay about the same. On the other hand, a great many celebrities in the country will be accused of murder, primarily by the lawyers in the employ of known criminals.

3. All decisions in the country will be rendered by making use of trial procedures. For example, suppose a Governor wants to get a bridge built. Or a family wants to decide whether to vacation in Scottsdale. In either case, twelve strangers will be brought in and sequestered, attorneys will speak presenting first one and then the other point of view and then the strangers will deliberate. Their decision will be presented to the Governor or to the head of the household written on a little piece of paper.

4. The president of Court TV will buy Microsoft, Exxon, General Motors, Saudi Arabia and Japan Inc. As the world's richest man he will own, among other things, a house on the ocean in the Hamptons.

5. If the trial ends in the year 1995, the following year will not be known as 1996 but as 1 A.O.J. The year after that will be 2 A.O.J. and so forth. What we now know as the year 1941 will be called 54 B.O.J. You get the idea.

6. All the work on the east coast of the United States will be done between the hours of 9 and 11 a.m. After that is vacation.

7. After about May 1995, all works of literature, movies, plays and music that have O.J. in the title will succeed and all works of literature, movies, plays and music that do not will fail. After July 1995, no new literature, movies, plays and music will be written without O.J. in the title.

8. The phrase O.J. will appear in just about every

"It's a really nice plaice," said Marlin, "I took a jellyfish there. She had eight silicone tentacles and slapped me with everyone of them when I tried to cop an eel."

Just at that moment, a really big fella swam in, he smelt really bad, "Cod! He's huge!" I said, "and very strange looking."

"He's a Tupperwhale," said Marlin, "comes in here every weekend lookin' for a tight seal."

I was sliding down oysters on the half. Marlin was melting the butter and giving me the fisheye on porpoise, if minnow what I mean. But hey, it takes more than butter to get my oyster moister.

"Listen," says Marlin, "just for the halibut, whaddaya say you ditch Gil? I don't wanna shark you, but rumor is he's bi-valve. We could take a sailfish to somewhere a little more private..."

"What, so you can coral me?" I said. I knew he was gonna hit on me tuna or later.

"That would be so bad?" he asked with that devilfish may care attitude.

"Not tonight finboy," I said, "I got a haddock."

sentence, spoken or written, in the United States. (This has already begun to happen.) For example "I will do an O.J. on you" means I will kill you. "Better do an O.J. to Gate 37" will mean you could be late for your plane. "Drink your O.J." will mean confess that you did it.

9. The fashion industry will split in two. Ugly, fat women will continue to have beautiful clothes designed for them. Beautiful thin women will get medieval armor and booby trap devices that go off when touched. (Sorry about the pun.)

10. The Presidential election of 1996, excuse me 1 A.O.J., will pit Republican nominee Lance Ito against Democrat Kato Kalin.

11. Nothing will be important unless it can be framed in terms of the O.J. trial. Example: "During the afternoon recess did you hear that the volcano Monatubo wiped the Philippines off the face of the earth?"

12. In late July, just as the summations are about to begin, President Clinton will declare the O.J. Simpson trial a national treasure and will insist that the jury declare a mistrial so it can be done all over again.

13. The English language will change dramatically. It will be sprinkled with legalese. For example, "Did there not come a time that afternoon when you ate a peanut butter and jelly sandwich?"

14. Whenever an Asian-American comes into a room, everybody will stand up.

15. The law in America will be considered a way to stardom. Lawyers will be celebrities just as today, movie stars are celebrities.

16. People will no longer care about right and wrong. They will care about whether the people they hire are skilled enough to keep them out of trouble.

17. Every car bought in America will be a white Bronco.

"Open Your Heart" Benefit Auction & Party

The Metropolitan Pavilion in NYC was the elegant setting for the 12th Annual Bailey House auction and party held to raise money for men, women and children living with HIV/AIDS. Bailey House provides the most important ingredient for treatment "A place to call home." The Silent auction consisted of lavish sets designed around movie themes such as "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in which all the items were for sale. There were also many individual items and services donated by local merchants. Tennis legend and guest of honor Martina Navratolova, started off the live auction by offering an autographed tennis racket, which she had actually used in tournament play. It went to Susan Curtis for $5,000 and was only the start. Sam Champion and Roz Abrams of ABC-TV News continued from there and encouraged the audience to dig deep. And dig they did as over $100,000 was raised. Regina Quattrochi, the Executive Director of Bailey House, gave a moving speech and everyone truly seemed to have a grand time looked magnificient. The Red Ball

Those New Yorkers who wanted to celebrate Valentine's Day in style could not have done better than taking their sweetheart to the Red Ball at the Plaza Hotel. Here they could hobnob with the rich, famous and well dressed. The Red Ball is the passion of Marty Richards in memory of his late wife Mary Lea Johnson Richards. The event benefits the Mary Lea Johnson Richards Institute at NYU Medical Ceneter which supports research and treatment of liver and pancreatic diseases, and the Children's Advocacy Center which helps abused children and families in crisis. There were cocktails in the Palm Court then dinner and dancing in the Grand Ballroom. Many of the women wore red ball gowns to celebrate the occasion. (Dan & Cat wonder how you do it, Marty!?) Valentine's Day Ask The Experts Luncheon

The friends and supporters of the East End Hospice gave a luncheon to allow women guests to hear and ask the experts about cosmetic dermatology, bone health, and yes, even cosmetic surgery at a luncheon given at the Lotus Club in New York. I was proud to be the emcee of the event, introducing such renowned names as Dr. Patricia Wexler, Dr. Daniel Baker, and Dr. Elizabeth Shane. In addition, other experts in fields like nutrition, fitness, and sports medicine sat at the various tables to give advice as guests lunched. This specific event was to benefit Camp Good Grief which is a Bereavement Program for Children at the East End Hospice in Westhampton Beach. As in years past, the volunteers have been so committed to events benefitting the Hospice. This year co-chairs Jacalyn Weinstein and Bonnie Bernstein were the stand up gals.

Why Did Dan's Papers Rate Lenz "Best Winery -- Depth of Vintages" in 1999?

The New York Times

"A Pomerol from Peconic" Goldberg

"..compares most favorably, and more accurately, with a good wine from St.-Émilion than anything from California." Prial

"...the Lenz Winery,... year after year has made one of America's two best gewürztraminers." Goldberg

"And how do Lenz wines stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them." Scholem

"Drink after the year 2000!" the label advises. Fat chance!"
"...this wine was born with big-league class." Goldberg

"Thick with cassis. Dark, with ruby-fire glints. Sumptuous aroma. Love the nose. Love it. Licorice. "Sweet". Berrylike.
Wow! Tastes smooth. Elegant. E-l-e-g-a-n-t. Perfect balance. Finesse. Plummy. It's the blackcurrant - the cassis - that gets you. Classical Médoc." Goldberg

Decanter

"...three vintages of Lenz Gold Label Chardonnay performed honourably in the company of the same years from Drouhin's Marquis de Laguiche Montrachet." Steven Spurrier

GrapeZine

"To me, this wine reaches a higher plane than anything else here; there's this Lenz, then there's everything else." M.Todd

"If this vintage were a crown, it's set with warm rubies, a few diamonds, and one crown jewel!" Mike Todd

plaisirs

"The (Lenz) 1993 and 1994 merlots, powerful and balanced, dominated the ('93 and '94) Pétrus vintages M.Dovaz

"The Lenz Gold Label 1993, 94, 95 were opposed by Burgundies of the same years, Montrachet, Marquis de Laguiche (J. Drouhin)! All three times, the Montrachet showed itself to be nervous, with citrus fruits, lemony, but totally dominated by oak. All three times the American wine was like a summer's day, rich, balanced and generous." M.Dovaz

The Wine

"(The merlot '95) reveals excellent ripeness, with loads of chocolate and mocha-imbued red and black cherries that are found throughout its flavor profile and long finish. Presently luscious, creamy, and verging on opulent, this wine possesses the requisite balance, fruit, and tannin for aging. Anticipated maturity: Now -- 2005. 88+ points." Rovani

"Lenz's 1996 Gold Label Chardonnay reveals complex hazelnut, yeast, and toast aromatics as well as flavors. This well crafted , medium-bodied, silky-textured wine will be at its best if drunk over the next 2-3 years." Rovani

William Sokolin

"Indisputably the leader of the region. The 'Le Montrachet' of Long Island..."

"What can we say? Mouton Rothschild 1982 at $10,000/case or Lenz Cab at $240/case? The answer is easy: save $9,760 and try the Lenz."

"This property is scoring knockouts with all their wines..."

Vinofile

"...one of the finest sparkling wines we've ever come across on this side of the Atlantic. How a small winery not known for its sparkling wines accomplished this feat is beyond us."
Josh Wesson and David Rosengarten

"Lenz has always had a hot hand with its Gewürtzraminers, and its 1988 is nothing short of a minor triumph."

"Leading the pack is the terrific Lenz Gold Label, a miracle of fruit, vanilla and gingersnaps." Rosengarten

Dan's Papers

"Ted Conklin, proprietor of The American Hotel, and one of the Hamptons' leading wine authorities, participated in the blind tasting and later said, 'In the past decade, Lenz has been the best representative of the potential of Long Island wines. Lenz has annually been pitted against Pétrus and other great chateaux, and this is a reaffirmation that Lenz wines are equal to the best wines of the world.'" Shari Alexander

New York

"Lenz champagne won Eberhard Müller's blind tasting over Veuve Cliquot; and he puts the [Lenz] winery's barrel-fermented Chardonnays ahead of Grand Cru Montrachets. 'In a tremendous upset,' he recalls, 'we voted the Lenz '95 Merlot ahead of [Chateu] Pétrus!'" NY Magazine

A New Star Is Born at the Hayden Planetarium

By Allison Wiley

Five years in the making and at a cost of $210 million, the much anticipated, highly debated Rose Center for Earth and Science opened to record crowds on February 19. The 333,500 square foot Rose Center is the most expansive, most expensive project that the American Museum of Natural History has undertaken in its 130 year history.

Based on the initially favorable public response, even amongst jaded New Yorkers, the many roadblocks encountered during its five years of planning and construction seem to be worth the effort. Originally conceived as a simple face lift in 1993, planners opted for a major overhaul in consideration of the degree of progress made in space technology since the planrtarium's inception in 1935. Plans for the project were begun in 1995 when architect James Polshek first proposed altering the old Hayden Planetarium which is a registered landmark. After months of public hearings during which anxious environmentalists weighed in and neighbors fretted about parking concerns, the elimation of a dog run and noise pollution due to various private events, the landmark commission voted unamimously in favor of Polshek's new design.

The old half-shell planetarium was then envisioned as a complete sphere. The result is a 87-foot aluminum global sphere that divides into two theatres. The new Hayden has 429 seats and houses the Zeiss Mark IX projector which can project 3-D images of nearly 10,000 stars from any point in the universe. Passport to the Universe, narrated by Tom Hanks, propels viewers on a 3-D journey past Saturn's rings, into the Orion Nebula where new stars are born, out to the farthest reaches of known space, and then returns to Earth in a shortcut through a black hole. Another highlight at the new complex is the laser show at the Big Bang Theatre, where Jodie Foster narrates a short program explaining the birth of the universe. From here, you'll exit the sphere and step onto the Cosmic Pathway, a ramp that spirals down to a cluster of exhibits below. Enroute, a 360-foot display marks the approximate age of the universe in billion-year increments, beginning with the Big Bang and continuing to the present day. To illustrate how brief the entire span of human life is, the final panel of the walkway displays a strand of human hair, the thickness of which symbolizes the length of our existance.

One of the "must see" components of the Rose Center is the Scales of the Universe Walkway, along the perimeter of the cube's second floor. It gives one the sense of the relative size of the universe by using the grand sphere as a reference point. It shows that if the sphere represents the sun, then a soccer ball-size model is in scale with the earth.

The Rose Center will take an estimated 4.5 million visitors yearly, far into the future of astrophysics. They are bound to be lulled into a state of childlike wonder by the soaring architecture and humbling exhibits about our position in the universe. For tickets to the new Hayden Planetarium's show, call 212-769-5200 or visit the museum

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

This was a fabulous weekend to shop. My mom and my sister Paula came out to visit for the holiday weekend and to do some serious shopping. So... Let's shop!

We decided to drive to East Quogue to Sonny's a.k.a Village Prime Meats on Main Street for some great provisions for the weekend. Sonny's has great lunches and hot homemade soups, imported specialties gourmet foods, not to mention the best apple pie I have ever had. This week's specials are homemade fresh mozzarella, homemade fresh pasta sauce and homemade fresh pasta. Looks like I'll be cooking Italian this weekend. Call Village Prime Meats at 653-8071 for his vacation schedule.

Nearby at Once Upon A Time you will find 50% off their winter stock and on March 18, their popular bag sale will be going on. So... mark your calendars.

In Southampton, the John Rogers Collection Outlet on Main Street was having their annual Presidents' Week Sale featuring beautiful hand-crafted teak reproductions and very exciting new accessories for the home and even office. Open seven days; check their overstocks, factory seconds and special purchases.

On Jobs Lane, American Pacific Factory Store is having an "Everything Must Go" sale with 30% off every item in the store, including previously reduced merchandise. For you summer renters, now is the time to stock up on comforters, linens, pillows and much more.

I can't believe that February is almost gone and March is on its way in. You can catch the tail end of the "February Heart Warmer" sale at Rose Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton and Patchogue, that features the 14 carat mirror heart bracelet selling for $59 and the diamond bracelet in yellow and white gold specially priced at $449. I especially love the 14 carat Amethyst necklace in the shape of a star for $199.

I am a fan of Story Time on Hampton Road in Southampton. This is a fun place for children, parents and teachers, where stories come alive with story hour every Wednesday at 11 a.m. The last chance February sale is on right now with 20% to 50% off. There are toys, books and more. My grandchildren love to be part of this great learning experience. Call 287-9035 for information.

On County Road 39 at Joseph's Interior Decorators the sale is outrageous. Look for 20% off on all the designer fabrics and up to 70% off on all shades and blinds. Joseph's is known for it's distinctive residential and commercial interiors and has been family owned and operated for forty years.

Hot of the press, The Seaspray Designs shop on Montauk Highway, behind Meghans in Water Mill is closing out with final closeouts at 50% to 75% off everything. Check this one out!

How about that Aesthetics Home Furnishings & Antiques? They have gotten quite a reputation. Located in the Water Mill Shoppes, they have acquired a reputation for the most diverse assortment of lighting and home accessories, silver plated candlesticks to die for, prints and decorative wall art that says take me home when you walk in the door. Aesthetics Home Furnishings is a very large space and is stacked to the rafters with merchandise coupled by the sweet scent of flowers, accompanied by relaxing music. The store stocks a great blending of accessories, prints, oil paintings with European, Asian and American Country themes. Urns from the Mediteranian coast of Turkey have been the best seller because of the trends towards earthy and simplistic accessories that complement the Hamptons country look that so many of their customers want. But far more interesting is the atmosphere that is like a fun cocktail party. Stop in and enjoy their early spring sale on all items. There is a huge selection of furniture, lighting and accessories that have just been marked down 20% to 50% off. There are new items on sale each week, always making room for new inventory.

At English Country Antiques on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton, Newtown Lane in East Hampton and North Sea Road in Southampton the "Home Sale" includes 30% off on 19 Century Chinese Antiques, 20% to 50% off upholstery, 15% to 50% off luxury linens and 20% off the designer fabrics for custom window treatments. We stopped off at Lisan & Company on Butter Lane for the huge warehouse sale on mirrors, decorative items, jelly cabinets, sconces, lots of country folk art furniture and much more. My mom bought a beautiful mirror-shelf for her dining room.

Don't miss the "Fabulous February Sale" at Antiques at Red Horse Plaza on Montauk Highway in East Hampton. This antique extravaganza is worth the trip because there are four shops joining together to make this a special sale informative as well as fun. Apsara Interior is open from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday through Monday, Architrove 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Lucca & Co., 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and R.E. Steele Antiques, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. All stores are offering 25% off, Architrove is offering 25% off on selected merchandise only.

I know this is not a sale, but it's worth a mention. At Joe's Garage on North Sea Road, for the month of February they were giving out a single long stemmed rose, with no strings attached if you stopped in just to say hi. Thanks Joe for the rose and the exceptional service!

Making Sag Harbor the end of our journey, we stopped at Latham House on Main Street. Their half price sale is going on right now. My friend Blaise loves this sale and has already stocked up on all his favorites. I picked up some great sport clothing for my friend John and my sons, Joe and Randy.

On the other hand, checking out Zinnia on Main Street, there are some irresistible reductions. Closing February 28 throught March 16 for renovations,' you should hurry in for a real sale, 50% to 80% off ladies clothing.

The day came to a nice end, my mom and sis and I had dinner with my daughter Michele, and my three grandsons, Michael, Joseph and Anthony at Giordiano's Restaurant on Noyac Road. Their the three course Pasta Special Night for $11.95 was the best buy of the day!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

CAROL HUNT AT ARLENE BUJESE GALLERY

Although spectators are forewarned that Carol Hunt's new exhibit features 500 days worth of paintings which celebrate the Millennium, we're still not quite prepared for the plethora of images confronting us. Or for that matter, the challenges such pieces present regarding aesthetic perception and signification (meaning).

"Millennium Project"

First, aesthetics. If we want to examine/appreciate each painting's formal qualities, we should consider the entire oeuvre as a sum of its parts and look at each piece separately. The obvious place to start, therefore, is at the beginning, each work dated chronologically– from August 19, 1998 through December 31, 1999 – and arranged on a vertical grid. From this process, we can perceive Ms. Hunt's command of various media and intriguing juxtapositions of colors/rhythms/lines. No two images are alike, yet some abstractions remind this critic of works on paper by James Brooks in their improvisational, lithe aspects (although Brooks' pieces are not as densely composed as Ms. Hunt's).

Next, signification. Here we can take the opposite approach to determine the overall meaning or effect of Ms. Hunt's images: the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. Using this perspective we can "read" the images vertically or horizontally, seeking out patterns that stand out – recurring colors, shapes, twists and turns.

Or, we can try another method that casts Ms. Hunt's project in a different mode – as a Rorschach Test, measuring her state of mind or ideas through time (500 days). For this, it would be helpful to peruse her journal which is placed on a gallery table – or, better yet, read her poem on the wall. It is here that we catch a glimpse of Ms. Hunt that reinforces her images in significant and subtle ways.

Expressions like "bittersweet explosion," "Grand Marnier," and "irrational exuberance," are a few poetic references that give philosophical substance, sensuality and coherence to Ms. Hunt's various pieces. Other terms in her poem mark Ms. Hunt's political concerns as well, particularly regarding Kosovo. Recurring references to animals, flowers and colors also reflect the artist's interest in nature – as well as in the entire cosmos (her computer generated imagery of past shows certainly proved this).

Ms. Hunt's poem is self-referential in a more direct way than her visual oeuvre, where we can perceive both her personal, interior self and her relationship to the exterior universe. That being the case, this critic would have liked to see the poem as an actual part of the imagery presentation – if this is possible: another configuration where the formal qualities and contextual meaning are incorporated as one installation.

Carol Hunt's "500 Days: A Millennium Project" will be on view at the Arlene Bujese Gallery in East Hampton until March 12.

Guy DeFraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Here on the dunes of the toney Hamp-tunes, as I find myself in a snapping suit about the problems of our shrinking but still dandy, sandy, grandiose beaches, I will have cause to remember the otherwise totally unmemorable movie The Beach and I will sink to my knees and thank heavens that we don't have the problems that film has.

BIG TITAN LEO IS LEFT BEACHED LIKE A WHALE

I feel mostly for the talented participants in the film's making like l'il ol' Leonard Di Caprio, not so much for the film's fictional island "Paradise" whose serene, unmarked white beach has: 1. hungry sharks a few yards out 2. an angry band of gung-ho, gun-happy guerrillas, a coconut toss away, who farm a marijuana plantation crop the size of Block Island and 3. enjoying all this... a merry band of Gen-Xers pretending a Haight-Ashbury style... long hair, Thai tie dyes and a back yard with enough pot to make those lazy days of summer really hazy. They enjoy their LOVE and PEACE mini society so much they will carry one of their own to another part of the island to die alone rather than take him to Thailand's mainland for medical aid and maybe reveal their Edenesque hideaway. The poor chap had been fishing (seemingly their only food source) and had great chunks taken off his hunky bod' (darn those pesky sharks).

PARADISE MORE MISPLACED THAN LOST

Club Med it ain't. For one thing, everyone there has a gorgeous body. However the cabana housing they built themselves is out of Better Homes and Gardens and their hand made furnishings are strictly Pier 1 Imports and you expect a young man to appear in a white starched jacket serving Mai Tai's with the little umbrellas. Once this pretty scene turns up you know why, the actually quite talented, Leonardo Di Caprio had been cast as the adventure seeking young man who dove head long into a Great Lightness of Being to find instead the Heart of Darkness. Sadly in the film version of Alex Garland's novel (which I understand paints an eerie, somber and chilling picture closer to Conrad's density) the darkness, conversely, never becomes deeply black enough... it winds up as light as the sunny beach and so light weight as to lack real impact and meaning.

OFF THE CHARTS

And this! From the heavy weight Scottish trio who made powerful, bitter-British, drug culture, knock-about rock 'n' roll wonders like Trainspotting. Director Danny Boyle, screenwriter John Hodge and producer Andrew MacDonald have put a lot into the picture that make them aces in the business like the first fifteen minutes of the film... down the dim, rash-ridden, sex seamy alleys of Thailand following Richard (Mr. Di Caprio), he has no gifts to speak of and no girlfriend and has only exercised his thumbs playing video games. Now he wants to do something. So on a bet he drinks a glass of snake blood! Then the movie makers do what they do best... they take Richard into his dank, dirty, paint peeling off the wall, prostitute and bug infested hotel. This is where the director and cameraman, Darius Khondji peak. Then, one of the teams favorite actors, Robert Carlyle, appears! To say he appears is like saying an atomic bomb goes off. In a terribly frightening, huge performance he tells Richard of a secret paradise island and gives him a hand drawn map. This is not the last we will see of Daffy Duck, as Carlyle's character calls himself. Fortunately, he is reprised for now Richard has talked the beautiful French couple, the room next to his, into joining him on his quest for real fun and games. And, out we go to that sun and blood drenched beach.

MY LORD, THERE ARE NO FLIES

I guess the Brit trio shouldn't have left their gloomy, clouded-over, dark homeland or maybe, not attempted to portray American styled hippies of the 60's... dunno, maybe they were out in the sun too long but, what the book tried and even the movie makers alluded to with clips of Apocalypse Now (Coppola's Vietnam War heart of darkness horrors), is a moralistic statement of the decline of values... there just a bomb-drop away from Vietnam. No matter how brilliant or, how harsh the techniques... there is that darned light, bright sun that even seems to stymie the cinematographer and those dog-goned light-headed, barely clad, beautiful people enjoying their idle idyll and teen idol Leo, cavorting as if they'd seen to many Beach Blanket movies. Look for Di Caprio making love in the water at night, lit by thousands of winking, twinkling, glowing star-specks of plankton. Oh my!

Leo handles himself very well and comes off better than most. The War Zones Tilda Swinton is just fine as the head of the laid-back colony with her fine straight blond hair as opposed to Brando's bald half lit dome as the other out-of-this-world ruler of non-conformists. I was hoping to see much more of Swinton. Not necessarily like her nude scene. The French couple, Virginie Ledoyen as Francoise and Guillaume Canet also do just fine, but like the others, they are just too mellowed-out to make a really big fire out of her love divided between Guillaume and Leonardo. Yes, the Bristling Brits have discovered Blue Lagoon and like many of their fellow countrymen long for the sunny spots like (I bite my tongue) Florida.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS, and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Paper's Film Festival.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

The Hurricane (+)

Denzel Washington is a magnificent actor. His performance, along with the fine acting of the supporting cast, made this film a spectacular experience – a real tour de force.

What makes Denzel Washington such an interesting performer is a gift that he shares with very few other actors. In fact, the only other actor who has this gift that comes to mind is Daniel Day-Lewis. The gift they share is that their faces are different in each role they play. If you encountered either of these two actors in a crowd and were not told in advance they were there, you wouldn't, or at least I wouldn't, recognize them.

Now to the movie. The film opens with flashbacks to Rubin "Hurricane" Carter's youth. When he was 11 years old, he protected a 7 year old child who was part of his posse from being picked up by a white child molester. In order to do this, he stabs the pervert with his pocket knife.

Thus begins Hurricane's "criminal" career. From that point on, Hurricane is persecuted by a racist police detective named Della Pesca (Dan Hedaya). Like Inspector Javert of Les Miserables fame, Detective Pesca pursues Hurricane throughout his life. Through the use of perjured testimony, Pesca is able to convict Hurricane, who by that time had become a successful prizefighter, of killing three people in a bar in New Jersey.

Because the murder victims were white, it was perceived as a racial killing, and Hurricane went on to spend the next twenty two years behind bars.

Several years after Hurricane was sent to prison, he serendipitously becomes the idol of a young black boy named Lesra Martin (Vicellous Reon Shannon), who read a copy of his autobiography. Lesra, a troubled young man originally from Brooklyn, now lives with three older people on a commune in Canada: two white men Sam (Liev Schreiber) and Terry (John Hannah); and a white woman Lisa (Deborah Kara Unger). Eventually, Lesra visits Hurricane in prison, then sets out to find the truth about the murders.

This movie is intended to be a docudrama based on the life of a prize fighter, and these four people really existed. Indeed, according to the movie, they eventually assemble the evidence necessary to establish Hurricane's innocence. Ultimately Hurricane is let out of prison pursuant to an order issued by a federal judge played by Rod Steiger.

The racial discrimination that Hurricane suffered throughout his life is horrendous and will hit you in your solar plexus. How he was able to cope with this discrimination, however, will make everyone, regardless of their race, feel proud of his accomplishments.

The theater at 13th and Broadway, where I often go to see movies, had an unusually large percentage of black patrons when I saw this film. Every black person, particularly children, should see this movie so as to enhance their racial pride by seeing how Hurricane overcame the odds, and how justice ultimately prevailed. In addition, they and everyone who sees this film, will have a great evening of entertainment.

The New York Times did a special investigation of the film and found that in a number of ways it did not always follow the facts of the case. Perhaps this was to make the film more dramatic. But the bottom line is that Hurricane was innocent, had been railroaded, and was ultimately let out of prison by a federal district court judge because there was sufficient proof to establish he had been convicted on perjured testimony.

Not Love, Just Frenzy (-)

This is a Spanish film written and directed by Alfonso Albacete, Miguel Bardern and David Menkes. All of the reviews I read put this movie down, and many of them did say that it was an attempt to copy the style of Pedro Almodovar. I generally admire Almodovar's work, so I decided to go.

The characters in this film were deviant and kinky, and several of the scenes contained attempts at humor. Of course, the movie includes sex in its many forms: heterosexual, homosexual (both gay and lesbian) and transvestites. The film also contains many film noir elements, i.e. deaths, detectives and sadism.

What it lacked however, was a good story and first-class dialogue. Making matters worse, the acting, while occasionally good, was never better than what you might expect at an acting school early in the semester. None of the actors will be familiar to you, so I'm not going to list their names.

You can decide to miss this flick without another thought. Be sure to see Almodovar's All About My Mother. That is the best film I've seen in years.

The Beach (-)

Pretentious junk are the first words that came to mind as I watched this film. Although it may give pleasure to adolescents who admire or identify with Leonardo DiCaprio, this film will not give anything to anyone else, let alone those who seek to be entertained at the movies.

To make matters even worse, the plot is hackneyed. A young man, Richard (Leonardo DiCaprio) goes to Thailand on vacation. While walking down the street, Richard is importuned by the street vendors, one of whom challenges him to drink a glass of snake blood. He does. This scene adds nothing to the flick.

Richard ends up at a cheap hostel, and makes the acquaintance of a French couple, Francoise (Virginie Ledoyen) and her lover Etienne (Giullaume Canet). Richard gains possession of a map which will, he hopes, lead him to an extraordinary island. and beach. The French couple join him for the trip.

They have to swim to the island where the beach is and now the adventure starts. As it turns out, the island is occupied by marijuana growers and smugglers, and a separate hippie colony of foreigners led by Sal (Tilda Swinton).

Everyone works on the basis that secrecy is key, and the commune members know they are there at the sufferance of the drug operators. On one occasion Sal and Richard go to the mainland for supplies. Interestingly, the members of the commune order their own supplies, each giving Richard the money he will need to buy them. Not much of a commune.

On the mainland Sal seduces Richard. This makes for big trouble on the island since Francoise and Richard have become lovers and she suspects his infidelity. There are shark scenes in a pool fed by a waterfall. Richard escapes injury but in a later scene, two members of the commune are bitten, one dying and the other suffering gangrene to his injured leg before expiring.

Oh yes, Richard had given a copy of the map to four young people he had met in the Thai capital before leaving on his adventure. They show up. Bedlam and shootings occur, destroying the commune as the drug operators display their anger.

It's all silly stuff, right out of a comic book for children. Leonardo isn't terrible, but he isn't especially good either. No one is particularly good. This is a definite don't waste your time going film.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Back in December a friend called to ask me where she could buy blood oranges, the zesty, full-bodied beauty of the citrus family. While blood oranges may be available in December, more than likely they will not show up until February or March. Blood oranges can be used and enjoyed in any way that you would use sweet oranges.

While supermarket produce sections are ablaze with a variety of juice oranges, navels, tangelos and other citrus varieties, blood oranges are going to be more expensive, so reserve them for dishes where their deep red color and flavor can be admired.

For garnishing a grilled fish dish blood orange segments, bursting with juice are added to an orange juice reduction, Dijon mustard and a bit of honey then combined with sautéed fennel, a favorite winter vegetable. I cooked the fennel until deliciously tender then combined it with the orange compote to serve over seared slabs of fresh tuna. The distinct flavors of sweet, salty and slightly acidic emerged to create a memorable taste.

The sweet, rich citrus flavor of blood oranges lend themselves perfectly to a dessert of caramelized orange slices to serve alone or to garnish a creamy ice cream.

Select blood oranges as you would any orange or grapefruit; they should feel heavy for their size. Blood oranges are a very good source of vitamin C and should be stored in the refrigerator.

SEARED TUNA WITH BLOOD ORANGE - FENNEL GLAZE

This is the perfect time of the year to prepare this zesty dish of seared tuna, caramelized fennel and rich, full-bodied blood orange segments.
Serves 6

For the Fennel
1 large bulb fennel, trimmed and thinly sliced
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 tablespoons water
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the Glaze
1 cup fresh orange juice
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon honey
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 blood oranges, peeled and sectioned
1-2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

For the tuna
6 tuna fillets, about 5-6 ounces each
2-3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Discard any hard or bruised outer layers of the fennel bulb. Cut in half lengthwise, then cut into julienne strips between 1/4 and 1/2 inch wide. Rinse and pat fennel dry with paper towels. Heat oil in a large skillet over medium heat and add the fennel. Sauté the pieces, turning to brown lightly on all sides. Add water and season with salt and pepper. Cover the pan and cook over low heat for 6-8 minutes, stirring occasionally or until fennel is tender and water is evaporated. Can be prepared ahead and stored covered at room temperature.

2. Pour orange juice into a small saucepan and simmer briskly, over medium heat, until reduced by half, about 6-8 minutes. Remove from heat, add Dijon mustard, honey, salt and pepper to taste and stir to mix. Stir in blood orange segments. Set aside. Can be prepared ahead and covered at room temperature.

3. About 20 minutes before ready to serve marinate the tuna fillets with lime juice and olive oil. Heat a sauté or grill pan over high heat. Adjust heat to medium-high and put in the tuna fillets. Cook about 1 1/2 - 2 minutes on each side for rare to medium-rare. Season with salt and pepper and slice thinly. Remove from heat. Meanwhile, warm the fennel over low heat and add the blood orange glaze. Stir to mix.

4. Divide and mound fennel mixture onto 6 plates. Surround with tuna slices and serve.

CARAMELIZED BLOOD ORANGES

A timely dessert to serve alone or to top a creamy ice-cream
Serves 6

7 blood oranges
Julienne strips of orange rind
1 1/2 cups water
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
Grated coconut or toasted almonds for garnish, optional

1. Peel rind of 2 oranges and cut into julienne strips. Set aside. Juice one of the oranges and set aside.

2. With a sharp serrated knife, slice off the top and bottom of remaining oranges, including the one used to cut julienne strips. Stand the fruit up and remove the skin and pith (white membrane) following the contour of the oranges. Slice into rounds approximately 1/2 thick and place in a glass serving bowl. Pour reserved juice over the orange slices.

3. In a saucepan, combine water, sugar and lemon juice. Stir to dissolve sugar as the mixture comes to a boil. Cook at a brisk simmer over medium heat about 15 minutes, until liquid is a thin syrup. Add julienne strips and simmer for 10-12 minutes longer. Add vanilla, stir to mix and remove from heat. Pour candied orange peel over orange slices. Cool, refrigerate and cover with plastic wrap. Prepare up to one day ahead.

When ready to serve, sprinkle grated coconut or slivered almonds over the orange slices, if desired.

Citarella Comes to Water Mill

Citarella, New York's premium seafood shop, butcher and charcuterie, is heading east – to the East End of Long Island, that is. Citarella owner Joe Gurrera announced that he is planning to open a branch of his popular food shops in Watermill, right on Montauk Highway between the towns of Bridgehampton and Southampton.

The new Citarella, expected to open in April, will occupy 7,000 square feet in the Watermill Shops, a small shopping plaza on Route 27. The store will feature two floors of retail space, with a full selection of seafood, prime meats and specialty foods identical to those found at Citarella's two current stores on Manhattan's Upper West and Upper East Sides. The Watermill store will also sell fresh produce from local Long Island farms.

"So many of our customers are regular visitors to Long Island that we consider this an extension of our Broadway and Third Avenue stores," Mr. Gurrera said. He noted that in addition to Citarella' s staple seafood and meats, the Watermill location will offer a solid array of specialty foods – foi gras, caviar, truffles, crab meat, jumbo shrimp and fresh imported fish, including Dover sole, turbot and pompano. "All the needs of the Hamptons gourmet shopper will be under one roof, in a very convenient spot," Mr. Gurrera said.

The opening of a Long Island store will coincide with the debut of a new mid-Manhattan Citarella, also set to open in the spring. The company will be rolling out a new selection of portable fare for all its locations, including panini, wraps and other sandwiches, plus salads, soups, rotisserie and pastas. As for the Hamptons, "It's one of the greatest 'to go' markets in the world," Mr. Gurrera said.

The Watermill kitchen will also be equipped for full-scale catering, a major asset in view of the Hamptons' heavy party circuit. Here Citarella has two major resources – a prime connection to New York's Fulton Fish Market, and its own meat commissary in Chelsea. For instance, Citarella carries more than eighty different kinds of seafood, while the commissary supplies Citarella butchers with fresh prime cut beef, the Tiffany of meat.

"We are blessed with a built-in supply of absolutely the best fresh meat and seafood available in New York – given the quality of our ingredients and our existing customer base, we expect to be a visible factor in the home entertaining and party scene in the Hamptons," said Mr. Gurrera,. who himself summers on Long Island.

Mr. Gurrera, who took out a long-term lease for the Watermill site, said that the new store could employ upwards of seventy five people, including catering and kitchen staff.

Citarella, originally founded in the 1920's, has been under Mr. Gurrera's ownership since 1982. As a seafood purveyor, Citarella has been called "a piscatory Mecca" by the Zagat Survey, while its meats and prepared foods helped make Citarella a must-stop for discriminating food shoppers, soon on Long Island as well as NYC.

Hampton Coffee Company Under New Ownership

The Hampton Coffee Company, the well-known espresso bar and cafe located at 869 Montauk Highway in Water Mill, is now under new ownership! The establishment's new owners are Pepé Martinez and Jason Belkin.

Pepé Martinez and Jason Belkin are by no means newcomers to the Hampton Coffee Company. Pepé has been managing the local business almost since it opened back in 1994. He has years of experience in the industry, as well as numerous credentials when it comes to roasting coffee beans, which is actually done right on the premises! Jason has more than five years of restaurant management experience, including one year as an Assistant Manager here at the Hampton Coffee Company.

As a small family-oriented business, Pepé and Jason say they feel it's important to be a part of the community and would like to extend an offer to local community groups and non-profit organizations. "During the winter, our cafe's dining room is used a lot less," said Jason. "So, we'd be happy to offer the use of the room to local groups as a place to hold their meetings. We'd also be happy to serve your group coffee and tea on the house." If you're interested, leave a message for Jason at the store at 726-2633. The Hampton Coffee Company is also happy to help with fundraising and coffee donations.

The Hampton Coffee Company has a loyal following among many local residents who stop by every morning for a delicious assortment of freshly-baked in the store breakfast items ranging from buttery scones to croissants to more than a half dozen variety of muffins, including two fat-free choices.

For lunch, the Hampton Coffee Company offers a homemade "Soup of the Day" to help take off the winter chill, as well as a mouth-watering selection of made-to-order gourmet salads and sandwiches. Their latest offering is tender Balsamic Grilled Chicken served on freshly-baked Sourdough Bread with lettuce, tomato, and either honey mustard or creamy herb spread. All sandwiches are served with a choice of a fresh side salad like Cucumber & Red Onion or Red Bliss Dill Potato salad.

For dessert, the Hampton Coffee Company will tempt you with homemade chocolate chip and oatmeal raisin cookies, hazelnut, chocolate-dipped, and almond Biscotti, and an assortment of fine pies and pastries like "Frutta Di Bosco," which is a fragrant short pastry shell with pastry cream, decorated with a rich assortment of the finest blueberries, blackberries, currant, and raspberries. Desserts are available individually or boxed to take home.

But the main attraction at the Hampton Coffee Company is their extensive variety of estate grown specialty coffees roasted right in the store by co-owner and "Roastmaster", Pepé Martinez. Where else can one bring home a pound of Organic Mexican Altura or Costa Rican Tarrazu coffee that had just been roasted?

While other shops' coffees come out of silver-foil bags with "Use By" dates stamped on them, stop by any Wednesday to see our beans being roasted. The aroma outside can actually be detected all the way up in town! Pricing is surprisingly low. All coffees available in the store are $10.99 a pound or $11.99 a pound for naturally-decaffeinated Swiss Water Decaf. Same prices for mail order delivered right to your door. There are even descriptions of each coffee's flavor right on the coffee barrels to help guide you in your decision-making. Try their signature Hampton Classic blend just once and you'll be hooked!

The Hampton Coffee Company also has great Gift Baskets perfect for holiday gift-giving for anyone on your holiday list and lots of last-minute gift ideas. Winter hours are 8-5 weekdays and 7-5 weekends. They are closed on Tuesdays until the Spring. For directions, more information, or mail orders, call 726-COFE or visit them on the internet at: www.hamptoncoffeecompany.com.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

The ideal conditions for germination of tomato seeds can be described in precise terms: temperatures between 75 and 85°F, plus constant moisture. Let's define this starting time as beginning when the seedling leaves unfold and ending when the first flowers are fertilized. The plants then shift their energy from vegetative growth to reproduction, the time when your vigilant nurturing starts to pay off.

Tomato seedlings are solar powered. Water and light are all they need for good growth, but that light must be intense. By all means use a grow light, and keep the bulb no more than three inches from the plants. If you can plug your light into a timer, set it for twelve hours of light, followed by twelve hours of darkness. If your plants are pale and spindly, they are starved for light, not plant food.

For the next three weeks, good nurturing consists of watering as needed, keeping your light adjusted to the advancing height of the plants, and introducing them to real sunlight by setting them in sunny windowsills for a few hours at a time.

You can start them with a little compost. Research from Spring Meadow Organic Farming & Gardening Reasearch Center suggests that anything stronger than compost is wasted on tomato plants less than eight weeks old and will have no effect on total yields.

If things go badly for you on the windowsill, don't give up. If protected from physical injury and given sufficient light and water, young tomato plants show impressive resilience to stress.

The greatest challenge to young tomatoes is becoming accustomed to wind when you set them out for hardening off. Once outdoors, a tomato feels more air movement than it has ever encountered. The young plants adapt to the breeze by changing the mosaic of cells on the outer layer of the stems, and this takes time, usually about five days.

As these cells become thicker and more twisted, the plants can withstand more wind. Their newly acquired armor also provides protection from various pathogens. When it's almost time for your young plants to move out, prepare proper homes for them outdoors.

For the best tomato flavor, you must provide a broad range of micronutrients; compost in the planting hole is the best source. Many organic gardeners plant their tomatoes very deep, so that only the top three or four leaves show above the soil, while others lay the plants diagonally, in shallow trenches with most of the stem buried.

Either way, new roots eventually will develop from the underground segment of stem. And, since the objective during the first few weeks after transplanting is to grow lots of roots and leaves, both planting methods work.

To minimize transplant shock, dunk seedlings in a fish/seaweed mix of three oz. to a gallon of water, let their roots soak for about thirty seconds, then transplant. If you use floating row covers, remember to remove the covers during a period of warm weather.

A couple of weeks after transplanting, give your plants a shot of the fish/seaweed foliar spray. Some organic gardeners use foliar sprays, but a kelp based (seaweed) foliar spray is used after the plants have begun to blossom. Kelp contains gibberellin-type compounds that stimulate flowering, and at this stage tomatoes should put their energy into growing new roots and leaves.

Be meticulous about weed control. The best way is simply to apply organic mulch as soon as the soil is warm. Start with a thin layer of nitrogen rich, grass clippings. Atop the grass clippings, place a layer of straw.

Mixing mulches often improves water penetration and increases the diversity of nutrients that leach through the mulch to the tomato roots below.

That diversity can improve flavor and pest resistance, and enhance your odds against the nutritional disorder known as blossom end rot.

Although you may not be able to see them yet, your tomato plants will develop blossoms after they have been in the ground for about a month. Hormones that proclaim the need for flowering already are coursing through the plants.

Elizabeth and Crow Miller are the proprietors of The Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Re search Center in Southold.

Acupuncture: Ancient Beginnings – Modern Practice

History tells us that primitive versions of the modern day acupuncture needle were found in China over two thousand years ago. Members of clan communes of primitive society found ways to heal infections with crude tools designed for therapeutic purposes. In northern China, using burning herbs to warm the body, became another healing therapy we call moxibustion. Just imagine oneself in that time: say you got a thorn stuck on your leg and now, it's red and hurts. Someone in your clan has a sharp, primitive looking stone tool and says he can help. Under the circumstances, you become a willing patient, and later, a grateful one.

Through long-term accumulation of experiences, more and more was observed and noted over time. What was effective for this problem or that one? Techniques and diagnostic skills were passed down through generations. Theories and principals of understanding were elaborated upon from the basic yin and yang, to five elements of wood, fire, earth, metal and water that related to various organ systems that functioned within the body. In the field of medicine the ancient physicians had a preliminary understanding of blood and pulse, body fluids, the energy of the body (called chi and pronounced "chee"), as well as exogenous (environmental elements like cold and wind) factors and perceiving aspects of vitality. These concepts became the sprouting seed of the basic theory of Traditional Chinese Medicine.

When metal casting techniques allowed the introduction and use of metal medical needles around 475 B.C. - A.D. 24 the field of acupuncture developed tremendously. Medical classics were written, further developing the basic theories of diagnosis, mapping out the meridians (channels of energy), and fine tuning concepts of yin and yang organ systems, and acupuncture treatment points. Theories developed regarding how emotions affected illness and vice versa.

Once the Eastern Han Dynasty and the Three Kingdoms Period arrived (A.D. 25-A.D. 265) locations of exact acupuncture points were unified and systematized. One famous doctor at that time stressed that medicinal herbs be used hand-in-hand with acupuncture for better results.

From these early roots, acupuncture became more and more complex through the centuries and specific health problems were studied in broader and deeper scope. By the Yuan Dynasty (1206-1368) printing techniques allowed the knowledge to spread. The accumulation of medical literature accelerated the dissemination and development of Chinese Medicine.

During the Qing Dynasty to the Opium War (1644-1840) Chinese medical doctors came to regard herbal medicines as superior. With Western medicine coming into China in the 1900's, colonists were aggressive about denouncing and depreciating Chinese Traditional Medicine. In 1914 the government of China banned their traditional medicine, but because there was such a need by the people for medical care, acupuncture spread throughout the countryside by way of common people, i.e. "Barefoot Doctors." Many acupuncturists struggled to protect the legacy of this great and ancient therapy by writing, teaching, and banding together to begin acupuncture associations.

In the 1940's acupuncture regained the respect it deserves and doctors trained in Western medicine began learning and researching acupuncture and moxibustion.

Since the founding of the People's Republic of China in the 1950's, the government once again took pride in its great legacy of developing and inheriting Traditional Chinese Medicine and pharmacology. Western Medicine was embraced and integrated with Traditional Chinese Medicine. Today in China, the two healthcare systems are respected and utilized simultaneously.

In the States, our National Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine Alliance is sponsoring the 7th Annual Conference and Expo in San Francisco in May. Another convention called Oriental Medicine 2000 will take place in Providence in September. Their focus is "Integrity and Integration" and they will be talking about a vision of the future for this field.

Why has acupuncture survived millennia? Because it works. It is an effective form of treatment for numerous imbalances. Certainly, it can reduce and remove muscular and joint pains. It can be used as an alternative therapy in that case, or in conjunction with Western medicine. Acupuncture can be used for treating anything from stress reduction, to headaches, sciatica, digestive disorders, Bell's Palsy, post-stroke recovery, women's health concerns, fatigue, quitting smoking; the list goes on.

Today, most patients want the approval of their doctors to receive acupuncture, and indeed should rule out or confirm more serious health issues. Acupuncturists are happy to have the information that X-rays, MRI's, EKG's and blood tests provide. Integrative medicine is now common in the United States.

Acupuncture is now part of our national and international culture. It has become a household word. Patients become increasingly sophisticated in their understanding of treatment options. Americans have embraced this ancient Chinese medicine so much that there has been dramatic growth in the field

POLICE BLOTTER

A Southampton man reported to police that an unknown intruder ransacked his apartment on Montauk Highway, stealing $200. When police arrived on the scene, the complainant had cleaned up the room. This put a crimp in the creditability of the reported ransacking.

Somebody stole $2,000 worth of lumber from a construction site on Fox Dune Court in Water Mill on February 7. The perpetrator of the lumber larceny lifted a ladder from the site, as well.

Perhaps the same larcenous lumber lifter struck in Sagaponak on Daniels Lane where a contractor reported the theft of $4,000 worth of wood. This time 400 square feet of vintage pine planks from a Vermont barn were heisted.

Another wood related crime was committed in East Hampton. The wily woodsman cut a cedar with bad intentions. The tree fell within inches of an unsuspecting Northwest man's car. The unknown lumberjack's victim told police that the salient sawsman had cut the tree so that nobody would see his handiwork. Two bushes also had gouges in them.

And in the last of the wood related crimes this week, a Riverhead man was arrested in Maidstone Park in East Hampton for allegedly "pleasuring himself" in broad daylight. A passing woman walking her dog spied the self stimulator and was somewhat upset. She attempted to block his truck with her car and told him she was calling the police. The man composed himself and left with the woman in hot pursuit. The dynamic duo was intercepted by the police, at which time the man denied any lewd behavior and claimed he was just relieving himself in the bushes. Unfortunately, that is also illegal in East Hampton and in other parts, and the man was arrested.

In a different type of self abuse, a Hampton Bays woman called 911 from the Hampton Bays Diner, and said she would continue to do so until she was arrested. Police gladly complied to her demands, arresting her for aggravated harassment, second degree.

A North Haven family was the victim of some pranksters recently. A mailbox was apparently vandalized by the removal of the first letter of the family's name. The new, unappreciated moniker was "weed." Also reported was the flinging of feces at the family car. Unfortunately, the family dog reportedly ate the feces, thus destroying valuable evidence in the case.

Another menacing mutt struck in Cutchogue. A Quogue woman was driving on Route 48 when her dog distracted her. She drove into the parking lot of North Fork Imports, jumped the curb and drove into the side of the building. She told police that the distracting dog caused her to hit the accelerator instead of the brake. She sustained a bump on the head; no one else was hurt.

A Laurel woman complained that someone was partying in her barn and she wasn't invited. The complainant told police that she found a beer keg in the barn. The police confiscated said keg, which is now safe from barn beer guzzlers in the police property room.

THE END IS NEAR

Dear Dan:

Your article poking fun at Y2K doomsayers left out antinuclear extremist Helen Caldicot, who resorted to parading nude through the streets of San Francisco, "desperate for press attention" to her fears of computer-generated nuclear meltdowns (San Francisco Examiner, October 4, 1999.) I didn't see it, but I guess that Caldicot in the nude might qualify as a disaster of sorts. So your Y2K disaster count need not be zero zero.
